[1] The average number of lines in 2008 was calculated by averaging the number of lines at the end of years 2007 and 2008. Because year-end 2008 line counts have not yet been filed with the Commission, the number of lines at the end of 2008 was estimated using a straight-line projection of data from 2004 to 2007. WESTGATE COMM. LLC dba WEAVTEL filed line count data beginning with year end 2007, so that number was used.

[3] The identical support rule (47 C.F.R. 54.307) does not guarantee that the incumbent and competitive ETCs will receive the same total high cost support per line within any period of time. In many cases per-line support is calculated at a level of aggregation below the study area. For example, per line support rates for both Interstate Access and Interstate Common Line Support are calculated separately for residential and multi-line business lines within a study area. If the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated differently across classes of lines, per-line support from these funding mechanisms will be unequal at the study-area level. Similarly, High-Cost Model (HCM) Support is calculated for each wire center rather than the study area as a whole. It is likely that the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated across wire centers in different proportions, leading to a condition where per-line HCM support is unequal at the study area level. Even in a case where the competitor and incumbent had their eligible lines allocated identically across different classes of lines or the parts of a study area, per-line support may be unequal since current support for either carrier may be adjusted based on revised data for prior periods.

[1] For wireless carriers, the Telcordia® LERG™ [Local Exchange Routing Guide] Routing Guide (the "LERG") was used to determine the switch names (and from that, the wire center names) for each incumbent ETC. American Roamer® was then used to create a list of competing wireless carriers. United States Census data and wirecenter boundary information were used to determine the percentages of population and area covered by each wireless carrier. For wireline carriers, the LERG was used to determine the rate centers served by each incumbent ETC. Any other wireline carrier serving those rate centers was added to the list of wireline carriers competing against the incumbent ETC. Because the Commission does not possess current rate center boundaries, census data were not used to determine the percentages of population and area covered by the rate center. A list of carriers receiving High-Cost Support was also generated using Tables HC18 - HC21 of the Appendices from USAC's quarterly filings for each quarter in 2008. Carriers on the first two lists (the American Roamer-based list and the LERG-based list) that were not on the High-Cost Support list are identified here. Because carriers may serve only a portion of a rate center, the list of wireline carriers may be over inclusive. In particular, because very small incumbent LECs may serve only a small portion of a large rate center, the list of wireline carriers (which can be developed only at the rate center level) may be significantly over inclusive in some instances. Also, matching carrier names among the lists is an imperfect art because, for example, carriers often use multiple different names. Although care was used in the matching process, there may be some carriers on this list that receive High-Cost Support. Further, our sources may have omitted other carriers, especially resellers, that compete with the incumbent but do not receive High-Cost Support.

[1] Source: USAC data. Federal Communications Commission staff was unable to independently validate these data.

[3] The identical support rule (47 C.F.R. 54.307) does not guarantee that the incumbent and competitive ETCs will receive the same total high cost support per line within any period of time. In many cases per-line support is calculated at a level of aggregation below the study area. For example, per line support rates for both Interstate Access and Interstate Common Line Support are calculated separately for residential and multi-line business lines within a study area. If the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated differently across classes of lines, per-line support from these funding mechanisms will be unequal at the study-area level. Similarly, High-Cost Model (HCM) Support is calculated for each wire center rather than the study area as a whole. It is likely that the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated across wire centers in different proportions, leading to a condition where per-line HCM support is unequal at the study area level. Even in a case where the competitor and incumbent had their eligible lines allocated identically across different classes of lines or the parts of a study area, per-line support may be unequal since current support for either carrier may be adjusted based on revised data for prior periods.

[3] The identical support rule (47 C.F.R. 54.307) does not guarantee that the incumbent and competitive ETCs will receive the same total high cost support per line within any period of time. In many cases per-line support is calculated at a level of aggregation below the study area. For example, per line support rates for both Interstate Access and Interstate Common Line Support are calculated separately for residential and multi-line business lines within a study area. If the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated differently across classes of lines, per-line support from these funding mechanisms will be unequal at the study-area level. Similarly, High-Cost Model (HCM) Support is calculated for each wire center rather than the study area as a whole. It is likely that the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated across wire centers in different proportions, leading to a condition where per-line HCM support is unequal at the study area level. Even in a case where the competitor and incumbent had their eligible lines allocated identically across different classes of lines or the parts of a study area, per-line support may be unequal since current support for either carrier may be adjusted based on revised data for prior periods.

[3] The identical support rule (47 C.F.R. 54.307) does not guarantee that the incumbent and competitive ETCs will receive the same total high cost support per line within any period of time. In many cases per-line support is calculated at a level of aggregation below the study area. For example, per line support rates for both Interstate Access and Interstate Common Line Support are calculated separately for residential and multi-line business lines within a study area. If the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated differently across classes of lines, per-line support from these funding mechanisms will be unequal at the study-area level. Similarly, High-Cost Model (HCM) Support is calculated for each wire center rather than the study area as a whole. It is likely that the lines of the incumbent and competitor(s) are allocated across wire centers in different proportions, leading to a condition where per-line HCM support is unequal at the study area level. Even in a case where the competitor and incumbent had their eligible lines allocated identically across different classes of lines or the parts of a study area, per-line support may be unequal since current support for either carrier may be adjusted based on revised data for prior periods.

List of Carriers Not Receiving High-Cost Support in 2008

* indicates a number less than 0.5.

[1] For wireless carriers, the Telcordia® LERG™ [Local Exchange Routing Guide] Routing Guide (the "LERG") was used to determine the switch names (and from that, the wire center names) for each incumbent ETC. American Roamer® was then used to create a list of competing wireless carriers. United States Census data and wirecenter boundary information were used to determine the percentages of population and area covered by each wireless carrier. For wireline carriers, the LERG was used to determine the rate centers served by each incumbent ETC. Any other wireline carrier serving those rate centers was added to the list of wireline carriers competing against the incumbent ETC. Because the Commission does not possess current rate center boundaries, census data were not used to determine the percentages of population and area covered by the rate center. A list of carriers receiving High-Cost Support was also generated using Tables HC18 - HC21 of the Appendices from USAC's quarterly filings for each quarter in 2008. Carriers on the first two lists (the American Roamer-based list and the LERG-based list) that were not on the High-Cost Support list are identified here. Because carriers may serve only a portion of a rate center, the list of wireline carriers may be over inclusive. Also, matching carrier names among the lists is an imperfect art because, for example, carriers often use multiple different names. Although care was used in the matching process, there may be some carriers on this list that receive High-Cost Support. Further, our sources may have omitted other carriers, especially resellers, that compete with the incumbent but do not receive High-Cost Support.

1. EXPLANATIONS:

A. Basic Rate. The FCC does not regulate local rates (basic rate for flat service). These would be regulated, if at all, at the state level. For purposes of this report, the Wireline Competition Bureau used a rate survey prepared by the National Association of State Utility Consumer Advocates (NASUCA). The NASUCA information includes both the "Basic Rate," (i.e., the rate charged by local carriers for flat rate service), plus federal universal service fund charges (USF) and federal subscriber line charges (SLCs) (defined below).

In December 2005, the Commission issued a notice of proposed rulemaking seeking comment on the non-rural support mechanism in light of issues raised by the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit (Tenth Circuit) in the Qwest II decision.[(1)] As part of the Remand NPRM, the FCC invited commenters, including state commissions, to submit rate data, suggest sources of such data, and propose methods of collecting and analyzing the data.

In response to the Remand NPRM, NASUCA submitted data that set forth a rate comparison of the monthly rate for residential flat-rate service in 11,252 non-rural company wire centers.[(2)] NASUCA collected the data by obtaining residential service recurring local rates from a commercial vendor. NASUCA then supplemented this rate data with additional pricing information provided by NASUCA members and from non-rural company websites.[(3)] The data included rate and pricing information as of October 2004.[(4)]

For this report, the FCC used the 2004 rate data that was submitted by NASUCA as part of the NASUCA Comments. Although the NASUCA Comments did not include rate data for rural areas and local rate data is not collected by the FCC, we have included local FCC*, 398 F.32 1222 (10th Cir. 2005) (Qwest II). In Qwest II, the Tenth Circuit invalidated the FCC's high-cost universal service support mechanism for non-rural carriers, which determines the amount of support to be provided to each state by comparing the statewide average forward-looking cost per line for non-rural carriers to a nationwide cost benchmark.

rate information for the rural carriers included in pages 3 through 5 that was compiled from the carriers' current state tariffs and webpages.

B. Subscriber Line Charge (SLC). The SLC is a fee that local phone companies may charge their customers to recover a portion of the cost of completing long distance calls on their local networks, subject to a cap regulated by the FCC. The SLC cap for residential/single-line business lines is lower than the cap for second or additional residential lines (non–primary lines) and lower than the cap for multi-line business lines. The SLC rates for 2008, 2007 and 2006 (respectively) are set forth starting on page 6 below. A combined report (showing 2008, 2007 and 2006 in one table) is set forth in Table 1 of this Part 6.

PART 6: LOCAL RATE INFORMATION FOR TOP STUDY AREAS

Local Rates: Top Study Area Codes - 2008: Rates for the study areas with the most eligible telecommunications carriers (ETCs) in 2008. Although the information requested was for the top 10 study areas, information on 12 study areas is included below because some study areas have the same number of ETCs. Ranges indicate that rates vary by wire center in that study area. Rates are as of 2004 except as noted below.[5]

Only the SLCs that became effective July 1st of each of the three years was used. It is possible that the SLC could have changed during the access year, but highly unlikely. Any temporary exogenous costs contained in the tariffed SLC rate has been removed from the above stated rates.

Excludes ISDN and DS1 SLCs and excess Port Charges

The Description and Justification of the 2006 annual access tariff filing was used to determine the appropriate tariffed rate to use for Iowa Telecom Svcs. Dba Iowa Telecom-Systems.

Only the former Bell Atlantic Telephone Companies, now Verizon Tariff F.C.C. No. 1, operates in WV.

Federal Communications Commission Response to United States House of Representatives Committee on Energy and Commerce Universal Service Fund Data Request of April 1, 2009

Part 9
States with a Statewide Universal Service Fund

INDEX AND EXPLANATIONS

Research Methodology..... Part 9, Page 2

States (including DC) that have any statewide universal service funding mechanism (State USF) .....Part 9, Page 4

PART 9: STATES THAT HAVE A STATEWIDE UNIVERSAL SERVICE FUND

Research Methodology:

The data summarized in Part 9 of this report represents publicly available information, not compiled by the FCC. For this report, the FCC's Wireline Competition Bureau (Bureau) employed the following methodology:

1. The Bureau relied on the data set forth in the NRRI 2005-2006 Survey.[1] The survey was conducted by NRRI between December 2005 and April 2006. State commissions in all 51 jurisdictions responded to the survey.

2. To the extent possible, the Bureau supplemented the NRRI 2005-2006 Survey with information available on state Public Utility Commissions (PUC) websites, in state PUC publications, and in state codes.

States that Include a "High-Cost" program within their State USF

What is Covered? The NRRI 2005-2006 Survey defines state USF High-Cost Programs in a broad sense, including all programs that help maintain low local telephone rates in high-cost or rural areas. This definition may include state high-cost recovery mechanisms that do not neatly fit into the description of the conventional high-cost programs.

How is it Funded? All of the states that have a high-cost program require incumbent local exchange carriers (LECs), competitive LECs, and interexchange carriers (IXCs) to contribute to the state high-cost program. Only five state commissions do not require commercial mobile radio service (CMRS) providers to contribute to the fund. Some states, including Nebraska and South Carolina, have begun to require voice over Internet protocol (VoIP) service providers to contribute to state funds.[2]

States that include a "Low-Income" program within their State USF

What is Covered? In 1984, the FCC established a Lifeline program designed to promote universal service by providing low-income individuals with discounts on the monthly cost of telephone service. Under the federal Lifeline program, eligible consumers in states that establish their own supplemental Lifeline programs receive additional federal discounts equal to the lesser of one-half of the state low-income discount or $1.75.[3] In states that provide state low-income support, federal Lifeline support is available to all subscribers who meet the state's prescribed eligibility requirements. Although states have some latitude in selecting means tests, state commissions must establish narrowly targeted qualification criteria that are based solely on income or factors directly related to income for low-income residents to be eligible for federal Lifeline support. In addition,

[2] NRRI 2005-2006 Survey at 4. Authority of states to assess VoIP service providers is currently being challenged in the courts, including in the United States Court of Appeals for the 8th Circuit, which has upheld a lower court decision finding that the Nebraska Public Service Commission does not have the authority to require interconnected VoIP service providers to contribute to the Nebraska universal service fund. See Vonage Holdings Corp. and Vonage Networks Inc. v. Nebraska Public Service Comm'n, No. 08-1764 (8th Cir. May 1, 2009).

states with eligible residents of tribal lands must ensure that their qualification criteria are reasonably designed to apply to low-income residents of tribal lands, if applicable.[4]

According to the NRRI 2005-2006 Survey, the low-income subsidy programs in most states only cover basic local residential telephone services (state Lifeline program). Some states provide a discount for the initial installation fee (state Link-Up program), while other states support both.[5]

How is it Funded? Among the 33 jurisdictions that have a state low-income subsidy program, twenty jurisdictions fund the program through a surcharge on carriers' revenue or customer bills. Low-income programs in other states are supported either by carriers' internal subsidy or by the general state tax revenue.[6]

States that include a "Schools and Libraries" program within their State USF

What is Covered? Most state subsidy programs for schools and libraries provide a subsidy for broadband Internet access, but do not include equipment and subsequent monthly subscription fees. Some programs cover other advanced services such as toll-free services and online access to databases.[7]

How is it Funded? The source of funding and the administration for state schools and libraries programs vary across states.[8]

States that include a "Rural Health Care" program within their State USF

What is Covered? Most state programs for rural health care facilities provide subsidies to broadband Internet access services; some include equipment as well as other advanced services such as toll-free services.[9]

How is it Funded? The source of funding and the administration for state rural health care programs vary from state to state.[10]
